I wish to extend my heartfelt gratitude to all the individuals and organisations for their invaluable contribution and support that was instrumental in giving shape to this thesis.

First and foremost, I wish to extend my deepest sense of gratitude and special regards to my Ph.D. Guide, Dr Sunjay Jain, Ex. Dean, Faculty of Fine Arts; Professor and Head, Department of Museology, for his incessant guidance, patience, support, and motivation that gave me enormous strength for pursuing the research. It has been a privilege to work under his valuable guidance and supervision. I shall always remain indebted to him for his constructive comments, careful evaluation, moral encouragement and all the academic support that has led to fruition of the study.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the Maharaja Sayajirao University of Baroda for giving the opportunity to pursue my research work in the University. I also wish to thank the University for granting me the University Research Scholarship (URS) at the initial stage of my research till I received the University Grants Commission's (UGC) JRF/SRF. I also extend my acknowledgments for the financial assistance from the UGC, New Delhi, in the form of Junior Research Fellowship (JRF) and Senior Research Fellowship (SRF), which supported the study.

I also wish to thank The Nehru Trust at The Victoria and Albert Museum (NTICVAM), London, for awarding the UK Visiting Fellowship Award 2016–17 in collaboration with the Charles Wallace Trust, India. I am also grateful to the Derby Museums that hosted the two months research project (August–October 2016) which was purely related to my thesis.

I gratefully acknowledge the help and support extended to me by the other teachers of the Department of Museology: Dr R. V. Ramana, Assistant Professor, and Dr Ambika Patel, Associate Professor, for their help and encouragement during the tenure of my study. I also wish to extend thanks to Prof N. R. Shah, retired faculty of the Department for his encouragement and kind support. I owe a sincere thanks to Mr Kirit Rahevar, Curator, ‘Museum’, Department of Museology, who has been very cooperative in sharing information, providing references from time to time and facilitating work in the ‘Museum’ of the Department of Museology related to designing of educational activities. The in-depth knowledge and valuable suggestions from all the teachers from time to time have been of great value to me.

I also wish to remember and record my thanks to the technical and non-teaching staff members of the Department: Mr Manu Bhai Rathwa, Technical Assistant, and Mr Chandrasekhar, Modeller, for assisting in the technical and administrative work. Mr Harshad Rohit, Photographer, Department of Museology, deserves a special mention for editing the visuals. I also wish to gratefully acknowledge Mr Santosh M. Kalekar and Mr Raisingh G. Rathwa (peons of the Department) for keeping the Department open during extended hours in the evening for work, and for helping me in petty but important jobs.

It is a pleasure to express my gratitude to other Ph.D. fellows in the Department of Museology and the post graduate students from various batches who remained a great source of motivation all through the research tenure. I gratefully acknowledge the assistance from: Ms Megha Ladhe (M.A. Part II student) for editing the tables and Ms Sonia Lisa Pereira, (M.A. Part I student) for preparing the charts and diagrams.

My heartfelt gratitude to other members of the Faculty of Fine Arts, members of the office staff of the Faculty Office, and the University Office for their valuable support and help throughout the tenure of my doctoral programme. Also special mention about the library facilities and staff of Shri Hansa Mehta Library and Faculty of Fine Arts which were extensively utilised during the project.

I owe my deep sense of gratitude to the curators and education staff of the fifteen museums in India for their generous help and needed assistance during the collection of data. I also wish to extend my sincere gratitude to the Learning Departments at: The Victoria and Albert Museum, V&A Museum of Childhood, and Horniman Museum, London; all the three sites of the Derby Museums, UK. My sincere thanks to the staff of all the museums, in India and UK, who despite their hectic work schedules, managed out time for interactions, filled the questionnaires, shared their resources and granted permission to attend and study the learning programmes.

I especially wish to thank Prof Deborah Swallow, Director, Courtauld Institute, London, and Executive Trustee, NTICVAM; Mr Richard Alford, Secretary, The Charles Wallace Trust, India; Ms Hannah Fox, Director Derby Museums; Ms Divia Patel, Curator, Asian Department, V&A; Mr Zahir and Ms Ruchita Sheikh, Artcore, Derby, for all the help that was extended during my stay in Derbyshire, UK. Mr Zahir and Ms Ruchita often invited me over for delicious treats and during festivals which always made me feel at home in UK. Sincere thanks are also due to my cousins in London and Scotland who hosted a part of my stay and facilitated other arrangements in Britain.

I wholeheartedly extend my deepest gratitude and respect to my parents, Mr Ravindra Krishan Bhardwaj and Mrs Deepak Bhardwaj, and aunt, Ms Charulata, for their unconditional love and encouragement in all these years of my life. Their sacrifices, struggles and moral support have been a great source of motivation and morale-booster through thick and thin. I specially wish to acknowledge my mother and my aunt for their presence in my life. My mother's strength, determination, and strong will power has always been a source of inspiration. The very fact that they all have always been there, at times just to listen to me, has helped me wade through a lot of difficulties. My brother, Captain Shubhangu Bhardwaj, also needs a special mention here who keeps reminding me to persevere and work diligently despite all hardships. I fall short of words to extend my love and gratitude to my mother-in-law, Mrs Monorama Mondal, without whose support the thesis would not have been completed.

I am particularly elated to thank my spouse, Uday Mondal, for being my pillar of strength all through these years. I deeply acknowledge his invaluable care, consistent support, patience, cooperation, encouragement and understanding that helped me tide over frequent bouts of depression. I am grateful to him for all his sacrifices and adjustments that helped me pursue my study. I especially wish to thank him for charging me up with positivity and courage even during the darkest of moments and for being beside me at every step.

I feel very ecstatic and overjoyed to extend my deepest love and gratitude to my little angel, my nine year old daughter Mahi, who through her sweet and adorable gestures encouraged me to pursue my study and bring it to completion. I deeply appreciate her for being extremely patient and co-operative as a small kid, all through the span of my research. Her sacrifices and tiny but precious contributions have been my biggest strengths. I dedicate all my pursuits to her.

Above all, I owe it all to the Almighty God, to each and every person I met and the all the experiences I have had that help me evolve as a person and give me the wisdom and determination to overcome obstacles, work persistently and continue learning in this unending journey of life.
