

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I take this opportunity to thank Professor (Miss) M. M. Shah, a dedicated Professor at the Centre of Advanced Study in Education, The M. S. University of Baroda, for her inspiring guidance to me right from the inception of this project to this very moment. But for her unfailing love and support, this project could not have been completed.

My sincere thanks are due to the 'subjects' of my experiment - the pupils of fifth grade of The Convent of Jesus and Mary School and The Baroda High School (Alkapuri Branch) of the academic session 1984-85. I also wish to record my thanks to the Principals of both these schools for the permission they granted to me for conducting the experiment and for the cooperation they extended to me throughout the experiment. The teachers of both these schools were also very cooperative and I thank them too.

I wish to mention here that I had several fruitful discussions with my colleagues at the various stages of the present study and my thanks are due to them too.

I must not forget to thank Mrs. Sarojini S. Padhye, the Librarian of the CASE, who was ever ready to extend a helping hand whenever I needed a book or a journal from the Library.

And last but not the least, I thank Mr. R. M. Soni for doing an excellent and speedy job of typing this thesis straight from my not a tidy manuscript.

Baroda,
January, 1987.
