

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

At the outset, I must thank my guide Professor M.D. Sharma, who initiated me to take up this research work and provided expert guidance. His persistence alone sustained me to undertake and complete this work. I cannot forget the ever helpful, kind and timely research guidance provided by our respectable Head of the Department, Professor (Smt.) B.N. Elavia, whenever I needed.

Our Dean of the Faculty Professor A.G. Patel, also took keen interest in my work and was in constant touch with my progress and always encouraged me to complete the work. I must show my gratitude to the university authorities, who have already obliged me by giving me the extensions several times during which the work progressed rather slowly.

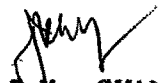

This work would not have been possible without co-operation extended by the top level executives of the public sector and private sector sample banks. Several executives and officers at Zonal Offices, Regional Offices and branches provided necessary information.

The departmental colleagues Shri D.K. Chellani, Ms. D.D. Bhatt, Shri Zafar Alam, Shri S.N. Bansal, Ms. Hema Chavan extended all the help I needed very willingly. I am thankful to all the Faculty Office staff headed by Shri U.D. Pandya and his team always stood by me and provided all necessary help.

At the end, I must express my special gratitude to my wife and children, who bore several inconveniences due to my work and encouraged me to work and helped whenever I needed it.

This work would not have been completed without tireless and hardworking typists Mr. Pragnesh N. Amin and Mr. Jimmy Vandriwala, who expeditiously and neatly typed the drafts and final thesis.

This is only a humble attempt at a serious work and many short comings are bound to remain despite care taken to avoid and remove them. For all that I am alone responsible.
