

APPENDIX - DTOPICS FOR PRACTICAL WORKUnit 1For group work

Introduce the person on your right to the one on your left.

Introduce the chief guest (imaginary) to the group.

Introduce yourself to the group.

Make a phone call to your friend at the end of the class and congratulate him for his success in the examination.

A makes a call to B. B. is not available at the phone.

C picks up the receiver. A leaves a message for B. C promises to pass the message on. Role-play.

For individual work

1. You stop a stranger on the road to find out your way to the Railway station. Write out a dialogue between you and the stranger (short dialogue)
2. Your friend wants to borrow your tape-recorder. You do not really want to let him borrow it. Construct a short dialogue.
3. Phone up your friend to greet him on his birthday. (a short phone dialogue)
4. Phone up Kalyan Restaurant and cancel the order for a party dinner that you had fixed up earlier.
5. Introduce your neighbour to your elderly father.
6. Introduce the General Manager of your company to your colleagues (15 in number)
7. You are on your way to the park with you wife when you meet a friend from your office who has heard about her, but they have never met. You introduce them to each other. Prepare a dialogue.
8. Your mother has come to stay with you for a short while. As you enter the gate, your landlady comes down the stairs. Introduce them both.

9. Construct sentences using the short forms that appeared in the dialogues.
10. Construct simple situations as to use the phrases "just like you," "see you later" and "I quite understand"

Unit 2

Support Material number 2 (Appendix A ii) is to be used for Practical work.

Unit 3

1. Write a paragraph on "The Solar Eclipse" of 16th February.
2. "Waiting on the platform for my friend to arrive". Write a paragraph.
3. Write a letter to your pen-pal telling her how nasty your neighbour is.
4. Support material number 3 (Appendix A ii)
5. Cover pages of "Wisecrack", Issue No.4, Nov.1979 (for paragraph writing) see overleaf.

Sweet Sixteen's Shopping Spree

BY AMULYA BARUAH

