

PREFACE

Domestic Violence is detrimental to women's physical and mental health including their very survival. It is a major contributor to the ill health of women. This empirical study carried out at the five select teaching hospitals in the state of Gujarat is an attempt to understand both women users' and health care providers' perspective of the health care system's response to the issue of domestic violence.

I will always remain indebted to all women, doctors, nurses, social-workers and others who allowed me to know about those personal aspects of their lives that most prefer not to disclose to a stranger. I thank all of them for responding to me and sharing their personal experiences, views on the subject.

It would have been impossible to carry out a research of this nature without the support and co-operation of state's administration. I thank Dr. Amarjit Singh, Secretary (Family Welfare) and Commissioner- Health, Medical Services, Medical Education and Research, Government of Gujarat; and Deans of the Medical Colleges and Superintendents of the different hospitals, site of my research work for facilitating the process of data collection.

My sincere gratitude to my research guide Dr. Leena Mehta for holding my hand like a mother and affectionately teaching me to walk through the difficult path of this research. I thank her for extending all her support, understanding and insightful guidance at the different stages of research upto its completion.

I thank Prof. Aruna Khasgiwala, Dean and Head, Faculty of Social Work for her support and co-operation.

I wish to acknowledge all my colleagues at the faculty and friends at WOHTRAC-WSRC, The M. S. University of Baroda for their critical feedback and suggestions at different stages of this research.

I am grateful to my family and friends for their unconditional help and support.

My friend and husband, Paresh, is the biggest strength of my life. He has stood rock solid by me throughout this journey.

My dear son, Siddhant, for being patient and understanding 'Mamma's' involvement and preoccupation with the research.

Above all, I thank GOD for giving me the courage, strength and resources to undertake this study.
