

Acknowledgement

It takes a long time to write a PhD thesis, though not as long as it takes to lay some rail track, surprisingly. I would here like to express my thanks to the people who have been very helpful to me during my journey of research and generation of this thesis.

First and foremost, I express my sincere and deep gratitude to Dr. P.C. Mankodi. His invaluable guidance, encouragement and enthusiastic approach towards science gave me strength to overcome all the difficulties that arose during this thesis. I consider myself fortunate to have been blessed by an outstanding supervisor like him.

I express my deep gratitude to Dr. G.A. Thivakaran, Scientist, Gujarat Institute of Desert Ecology (GUIDE) for encouraging and supporting me in each and every aspect of research. His kindness and soft nature always inspire me in the fieldwork.

I am thankful to Dr. V. Vijaykumar, Dep. Director of GUIDE for providing facilities and research work. His valuable suggestions and encouragement and approach to works help me a lot to complete this study. I am also thankful to Head, Department of Zoology, Faculty of Science, The M. S. University of Baroda, Vadodara and all the staff members, teaching and non-teaching for their cooperation during this research work.

I am also thankful to Ministry of Environment and Forests, Government of India, to extend financial support for this research work.

I have been fortunate to come across many funny and good friends, without whom life would be bleak. I am thankful to all my loving friends without their company it was impossible to complete this research works. Special thanks go to Gajera Nikunj, Pabani Kaushik, Kalpesh Patel, Rohit Patel, Pradip Patel, Dr. Chandresh Dave, Darsh Wohra, Mayurdan Gadhavi and Khushali Pandya for their immense support and encouragement. Their suggestions, discussions, ideas and cheerful attitudes made my difficult task seem easier.

I express my sincere gratitude to my Parents, Brother, Sisters and my wife - Priti Kardani for continuous support and encouragement.

Hitesh
Hitesh K Kardani