

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I offer my deepest gratitude to the Almighty whose benevolence has enabled me to undertake this study.

I am greatly indebted to my guide, Professor (Mrs.) B.H. Elavia, RBI Professor of Banking and former Head, Department of Banking and Business Finance, who not only supervised this study but has also been the motivating force behind my efforts to complete this study. This study is the outcome of her personal initiative and attention.

My sincere thanks are due to Professor Kathleen Cloud, Director, Office of Women In International Development (WID), University of Illinois, USA, for taking a keen interest in my study and enlightening me on the various issues related to my study. I am also thankful to her and the Office staff of the WID for providing me around help including financial support during my visit to University of Illinois, USA.

I am also thankful to Professor Jean Due, Professor, Department of Agricultural Economics, University of Illinois, Urbana Champaign for her valuable suggestions related to my study.

I am thankful to Professor David L. Chicoine, Head, Department of Agricultural Economics, University of Illinois, Urbana Champaign, for the discussions related to my study.

I am grateful to Professor (Mrs.) Amita Verma, Director, Women Households Development Studies Information Centre (WHODSIC), Faculty of Home Science for providing me an opportunity to visit UIUC, USA for studying Household Research methods. I am also thankful to the WHODSIC Office and library staff for their kind co-operation.

I am thankful to Professor B.S. Patel, Dean, Faculty of Commerce and Professor J.K. Syan, Head, Department of Banking and Business Finance for their kind co-operation and valuable support. Sincere thanks are due to my other colleagues in the department for their co-operation.

I greatly benefitted from Smt. Hansa Mehta Library, M.S.U. Baroda, University library, University of Illinois Urbana Champaign, USA and the library of National Institute of Rural Development (NIRD), Hyderabad. I sincerely thank the Office staff of these libraries.

I am very thankful to Shri Sreenivas for the around valuable support and encouragement he provided to me in my efforts to complete this study.

I am sincerely thankful to Shri Jimmy Vandriwala for the continuous alround help since the begining of this work to the final typing of this thesis.

I am highly indebted to my mother and father and all the other members of my family for their inspiration and encouragement.

Z. Alam.

ZAFAR ALAM