C K N O W L E D G E M E N T S

This doctoral thesis is the outcome of the sustained research study in the area of microteaching carried out for the in-service teachers' training programme on the development of their teaching competence and teacher behaviour.

I am very much grateful to my supervisor Professor B.K.Passi, Head, Department of Education, University of Indore, Indore for his continuous encouragement and inspiration in the completion of this study. He has been an informally accessible mine of information and knowledge to me. Without his untiring guidance this thesis would not have attained its present form and finish.

I am also equally indebted and express my gratitude to my teacher, Professor R.C.Das, Dean (A & R) and Head, Department of Teacher Education, NCERT, New Delhi for his constant moral and academic support. Infact, he has been steering all the activities that have undergone behind this research work. His valuable suggestions, from time to time, have really helped the enrichment of the thesis.

I take this opportunity to express my gratefulness to Prof. S.C.Dash, Director, State Institute of Education, Orissa, Bhubaneswar for provoking me to undertake research activities and for giving academic support during my professional career.

I am also thankful to the Headmasters of nine secondary schools of Orissa, the participating teachers and pupils for their active help and cooperation during the field work. Besides, I would like to thank my teacher Shri Chintamani Jena, Retired Headmaster, S.B.High School, Bhingarpur for his untiring cooperation in acting as one of the observers in each school during the field work.

I am grateful to the authorities of NCERT, New Delhi for offering me an opportunity to work as a Research Fellow in the Department of Teacher Education, NCERT, New Delhi. I am also equally thankful to the Managing Committee, Maharatha Bidyapith, Naharkanta for relieving me to undertake this study.

I would also like to record my thankfulness to all those authors who have been consulted and cited in the thesis.

Lastly, I convey my hearty thanks to my wife 'Kamal', my children and family members for their constant cooperation and encouragement through out the study.
