

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

I have the very pleasant duty of acknowledging the help I have received from various people and institutions. First I owe a great debt of gratitude to Professor V.N.Kothari, the unassuming Head of the Department of Economics, the M.S.University of Baroda. At every stage of the thesis, he has been giving his valuable advice and criticism. I am most grateful to him for sparing his valuable time and sympathetically sharing my difficulties in view of my employment at Hyderabad, 1200 kilometres away from Baroda. It is extremely difficult in Indian conditions for a college teacher to complete thesis in a minimum period of two years, from the date of registration, attending to regular teaching work. This has become possible due to the ungrudging help given by my supervisor Professor Kothari.

I am indebted to Dr. A.Nagaraj of Post-Graduate Centre of Osmania University at Hyderabad Evening College. He has been of immense benefit to me since at all stages he has been going through the thesis very minutely. Dr. Nagaraj first suggested to me the new measure of evaluation of capital based on Sraffa's model and gave a shape to paras 5.14 to 5.20.

I shall be failing in my duty if I do not acknowledge the help that the South Central Railway office gave me so readily. I have to particularly mention the good natured Mr.M.W.Carey of the Statistical Department of the South Central Railway. The staff of the Railway Board at Delhi were very cooperative. Mention must made of the facilities extended to me by Dr.P.C.Joshi, Economic Advisor, Mr.Eswar Das, Mr.R.K.Kaura and Dr.Jhanson of the Railway Board.

I have benefited much from the encouragement given by Professor H.S.Iyengar of Osmania University. I am grateful to the Indian Institute of Economics and Osmania University who provided me the facility to process the data. I would like to record my warm appreciation to the Indian Council of Social Science Research, Delhi for research help. I am thankful to Dr. M.N.Dahi, Reader in Economics of Baroda University with whom I had discussions.

I had correspondence with the following economists: Professor Harold Harger of Columbia University, Professor D.Philip Locklin, Emeritus Professor of University of Illinois, Professor Jim Taylor of Lancashire University, Dr. R.K.Sagar of National Council of Applied Economic Research and Training Delhi, Dr. R.K.Keshal of Ohio University, Mrs.Uma Roy Choudhury of Central Statistical Organisation Delhi, Professor D.U.Sastry of Institute of Economic Growth Delhi, Professor Geoff. Friscoe of University of Warwick and Professor D.L.Munby of Maffield College Oxford. Though I received valuable suggestions and comments from many learned persons, it was not possible to incorporate all their suggestions. It is a pleasure to thank them all and I hasten to absolve them of any responsibility for errors and omissions.

Mr.A.Basalingappa has done a fine job. He has been so quick and efficient that I feel lot of human capital was left unutilised. Indian tradition prevents me from the usual compliments to the sacrificing wife but for whose patience the thesis would not have seen the light of the day.
