

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I welcome this opportunity to express my feelings of gratitude to all the people who have helped me in completing my thesis within a reasonable time period. On the academic front the first person whom I would like to thank is my guiding teacher and our head of the Department, Professor V.N. Kothari. But for his guidance and valuable suggestions it would have been very difficult, if not impossible, to complete my thesis. He has always been very sympathetic to my problems. It was on his encouragement that I heavily depended when I lost confidence in my abilities to solve the problems that I frequently faced. My words, indeed, fail me in expressing my feelings of gratitude towards him.

I am, equally, indebted to Dr. M.M. Dadi and Dr. S.R. Hashim, my two colleagues in the department. I have benefited, beyond words, from the discussion that I had with them regarding my thesis. They did not only make the discussion lively and pleasant but they invariably came up with very valuable suggestions during the discussion. It was their interest, help and encouragement which made it possible for me to complete my thesis. These are the three outstanding sources of inspiration and help to me in my department.

On the domestic front I am deeply indebted to my husband. Though we happen to be in very different lines of discipline, at each and every stage he has taken keen interest in my work and has encouraged me whenever I was discouraged by my problems. It was he, along with my parents-in-laws, who completely relieved me from my household duties as a housewife. My in-laws have been very kind and nice to me. Along with my parents-in-laws it is my sister-in-law who deserves a special mention for being very kind and understanding to my problems.

I would, further, like to express my feelings of gratitude to my parents on the one hand and my daughters on the other. My parents did all in their power to help me in completing my thesis. My daughters, Shefali and Shilpa, inspite of being very young, did not demand my time that was rightfully theirs. Even during their illness they did not insist on my remaining present at home.

I cannot resist the temptation of expressing the feeling of gratitude towards Mr. C.N.Kachhia, our typist, Mr.Kachhia, besides being an excellent and a very speedy typist, is also a very pleasant person to work with. I am thankful to him for his excellent typing and cooperation.

I have benefitted a lot from the library services provided to me by the Gujarat Electricity Board's librarian Mr. Shah. I am thankful to Mr. S.K. Choudhary, Secretary of the G.E.B., for being very kind in granting me the permission to use the library of the G.E.B. I am thankful to our peon, Shri Ranchhodbhai P. Padhiyar, for rendering untiring services to me during my research.

Baroda :

7th May 1977

M. N. SHAH