PhD is a roller coaster journey that is alienating, complex, confusing, and frustrating but also tremendously meaningful!

The journey to accomplish this work has been difficult, but it has been a professional, intellectual, and personal learning experience. There were times when I was excited and passionate about my work, and other times, everything seemed bleak and dreary. These experiences have ‘deconstructed’ my self-concept in order to make me more conscious of my limitations and strengths.

I would want to take this time to thank everyone who helped and guided me during the completion of this thesis.

It is easy to become lost, and I am quite good at it, but finding the road and the proper path is made simple by the direction of wonderful professors, friends, and mentors. I am grateful to Prof. (Dr.) Chhaya Patel, who has patiently guided and encouraged me. She always stood behind me to support me in difficult times. I have learned a lot about how a professional should operate from the way she works and her prompt responses to my chapter drafts. I owe you, madam, for the progress of this research. I will always cherish these years of engagement with you and hope to have such opportunities in the future.

I would like to thank Dean & Head, Prof. (Dr.) Bhavna Mehta, Former Dean Prof. (Dr.) Jagdish Solanki and Prof. (Dr) M.N. Parmar for facilitating the administrative procedure of the PhD programme and for their insightful comments and support.

I am also thankful to my external experts in the departmental presentations, Prof. K. Pushpanadham and Prof. Deepti Oza from the Faculty of Education and Psychology, Prof. Anjali Pahad, Faculty of Family and Community Sciences, Prof. Sreedevi Xavier, and Prof. Amit Dholakia from Faculty of Arts. I gained a lot from their academic inputs during the presentations. I am grateful to Prof. Neelam Sukharamani, Department of Social Work, Jamia Millia Islamia, for her valuable suggestions.

I thank the FRC members and former PhD coordinator Prof. (Dr.) Sunita Nambiar and Prof. (Dr.) Ankur Saxena, coordinator Dr Kavita Sindhav for administrative and academic support.

I am grateful to the library staff at the Faculty of Social Work, Smt. Hansa Mehta Library, the Mahatma Gandhi Kashi Vidyapeeth Library, and the TISS library for their assistance during my visits. I thank the University Grants Commission, New Delhi, for the honour of awarding me

Junior Research Fellowship, which supported and facilitated my doctoral research immensely. It boosted my confidence to pursue this pioneering research, involving extensive field trips in the entire state of Gujarat.

I am indebted to the social work practitioners, their staff, and families who have participated in this study. I thank them for their time, efforts, and support during my fieldwork.

Living away from home would not have been easy and comfortable without Sanyunkta Joshi and my friend Jayshree Chavda. She cared for my food and medication like my mother during this journey and had been constant through thick and thin.

I want to thank Mr Kapil Kantharia, my trainer, for his encouragement and concern for my health and well-being during the journey.

My gratitude goes beyond words to my parents and brother, who have supported and blessed me throughout my life.

I wish to place it on record that, this doctoral research has proved to be a very exciting and rewarding foundational academic journey.

With deep gratitude and a breath, I acknowledge everyone's contribution to this research.
