

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I welcome this opportunity to express my feelings of gratitude to all the people who have helped me in different ways in completing this thesis. On the academic front the first person whom I would like to thank is my guiding teacher Professor V.N. Kothari for his valuable guidance, suggestions and critical comments at every stage of the work. He has always been very sympathetic to my problems. In spite of his various preoccupation, he spent his valuable time in going through critically each and every word of the present thesis. Actually my words fail me in expressing my feelings and gratitude towards him. Indeed I am fortunate to have him as my guide.

I am thankful to Professor M.M. Dadi, Head, Department of Economics for his sympathy towards my various problems during the study period and his help to solve these problems. I am grateful to Mr. D.K. Oza, Reader in Economics, for his kindness to me. He was always attentive to my topic of research and academic interest and supported me with his personal books, journals etc. He was very friendly to me during my stay in Baroda. I am thankful to other teachers of the Department for their sympathetic attitude towards me.

I am grateful to the Government of India for the award of scholarship. I am thankful to Government of Bangladesh for nominating me for the Indian Government Scholarship Scheme.

I must thank Mr. A.T.M. Shamsul Haque, Director, Center on Integrated Rural Development for Asia and the Pacific (CIRDAP), Chameli House, Topkhana Road, Dhaka, for granting me leave from the office for the study period. I am also thankful to CIRDAP for the support I got from it in terms of supply of books, reports, journals etc. for my research work.

I thank the staff of Smt. Hansa Mehta Library, M. S. University of Baroda for providing me all types of library facilities.

I intend to express my gratitude to my friends who helped me in various ways during my research work. I would like to mention name of Dr. Pradhan, Department of Education who was my neighbour in the hostel. I used to discuss with him various research problems. He was very kind to me. I always shared my ideas regarding various problems of the present research work with my friend Mr. R.S. Mani, Department of Education. Besides the academic, I used to share with him my personal and family problems. He was always nice to me. I remember the help of friends like Mr. Nazrul Islam, Assistant Professor, Dhaka University, presently research scholar at Department of Psychology and Mr. Delwar Hussain Sheikh, Assistant Professor, Dhaka University, presently research scholar at the Department of Education in the final stage of this thesis. I must thank Mr. Kanubhai Patel for typing the present thesis nicely and in time.

I thank my brother-in-law, Mr. A.Q. Fazlul Haq, for his kind support to my family during the study period.

My wife, Rani, during my difficult period of research not only took the responsibility of all household affairs which relieved me from many anxieties but also helped me in various activities of the present research work. She not only shared my anxieties and excitements, but also showed an excellent understanding and patience as I remained absent from home most of the time. I feel guilty to my son Sampad who was deprived of my attention and affection during the research work. Hopefully he will forgive me when he will grow up and see this volume of work that I produced for my Ph.D. Degree.

BARODA :

April, 1989

M. A. MOMIN