

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Although my name is on its spine, this thesis has only been made possible through the efforts of others to whom I owe debts of gratitude that cannot be repaid in a few modest paragraphs. My first thanks must go to Dr. Ashir S. Mehta, my advisor, for his support, encouragement, and advice during every stage of my research, since August 2006. I have always benefited from his useful comments, suggestions and constructive discussions. I thank you for investing enormous efforts and time to help me with writing and correcting all manuscripts I wrote. His excellent skills in English language made the concepts of my manuscript more clear. I would also like to gratefully acknowledge the enthusiastic supervision. Dear Sir, I am very proud to be your PhD student and thank you for being my academic guide.

The research upon which this thesis is based was made possible through financial support from Nehru Foundation. I am grateful to the Foundation for grant the JNM Fellowship from 2008 January to 2009 December for my research work.

I would also like to thank the faculty members of Department of Economics, M.S.University. My sincere thank to Prof. Bhawana Kantawala (former Head of the Department) and Prof. P.R. Joshi (Head of the Department) for their timely administrative and academic help since my PhD registration under this department. Thank to Prof. A.S. Rao, Dr. Sarah Ahmed, Dr. S.M. Joshi, Dr. T. R. Bishnoi and Dr. V.K. Padaria for their inspiring words and discussions. I am proud to have had the opportunity to work with and learn from them.

I am thankful to Mr. Jayaram Poduval, who suggests the name of Dr. Ashir Mehta as my research guide; to Prof. R. J. Shah (former Dean) and Prof. N.J. Vyas, Dean, Faculty of Arts, for providing all possible help during my research work. I express my sincere thanks to Mr. Bhupesh Pathak (former Department Librarian) for his constructive discussions and library assistance. Thank to Mrs. Maya Rawal and Mr. Hemant Chauhan for the library assistance and administrative support.

I must express my gratitude to my teachers who support me with their knowledge, dynamism, constructive criticism and love that made the thesis conceptually strong. I am obliged to Dr. M. Kunhaman, Dr. G.K. Pillai, Dr. Alwin Prakash and Dr. Shajee Varkey (Univesity of Kerala Kariavattom Campus); to Dr. N.D.Mani and Dr. N. Lalitha (GRI Dindigal); and to Dr. Omana Cheiyan, Dr. Ommen Zachariah, Mrs. Roshny P. Mathai, Mr. Thomas George, Mr. Pius Joseph, Mrs Jollyamma George, Mrs. Merry Zachariah and Late Mr. Jaison George (St. Thomas College Kozhencherry) for the heterodox nature of this thesis.

I must mention the names of my friends here, without their support I would possibly not have completed this research. I express my deep sense of gratitude to my senior research scholars Sanchita deedi and Fenil deedi for their directions in my thesis and to my collogue reserchers -Sumana, Sobita, Sofia and Smitha S. Kumar for their moral supports and inspiring discussions.

My sincere thank to Sujeesh M.K. my M.Phil batch mate who helped me in the course of data collection at Attappady; to Prabhu and his Parents who gave the accommodation and all helps for Plachimada study at Palakkad. To other Gandhigram friends- Stephen, Anish, Sano and others who share the conceptual views of this thesis during my Gandhigram life. To Manu P. Toms (Hindu Business Line) and Jomon Joseph for their polite request- “do not advice me I know how to make mistakes” that help me to develop a different way of analysis in this thesis. To Athulya (KU), she gave the significant geographical data of Palakkad.

I am grateful to the delightful atmosphere of Vikram Sarabhai Post Graduate Hall for its dynamic research scholars- Romesh, Koiramba, Vinod V., Rajendran, Ashish Mishra, Sam, Sakesh, Somraj for the constructive discussions during my research work. To Vinod bhoi, Mayur, Hareesh, Dinakaran, Parimal, Gourav, Hemant, Chetan, Narayan and Mahesh those made my hostel life more enthusiastic. To Prabhin and family, they supported me a lot in Baroda life. His academic supports and brother-concern deserves thanks from me.

I am thankful to various NGO persons, Medias and local politicians for their supportive actions during my data collection. Keraleeyam Robin, Brahmaputhran, Vilayodi Venugopal, Arumugan Pathichira and Late Mrs. Mylamma shared their views and discussed about the local water issues and its intensity in rural life. To the office bearers and volunteers of AHADS explained and gave the details about the projects and helped me in the field surveys also. Moreover, I am grateful to the people of Plachimada and AHADS for their co-operation during data collection. I am taking this opportunity to appreciate the Plachimada people for their sacrifice and their brave steps against the MNC giant that aware World about the corporate loot of water.

I am grateful to Rajesh S. V. (Department of Archeology), my dearest friend, for his constructive criticism and arguments that often shaken my thoughts and research directions also. We spent a good time in debates beyond the borders of Economics and Archeology that helped me to continue my research with no stress and strain. He provided tremendous support and help during the last lap of thesis submission that made the thesis beautiful.

And it is my family, especially my parents, who I have to thank for encouraging me to pursue my dreams, whatever and however strange they may have been. My gratitude goes to Chachen (Mr. K.V. Chandy) for giving me the freedom to pursue my lengthy academic life anywhere. I know that my Amma (Mrs. Accamma Chandy) specially, has endured long restless nights, worrying and caring about her children, especially in my childhood. This is my Parent's dream and prayer: to make their children notable academicians and social responsible persons; and they might have accomplished with the submission of this thesis.

Acknowledgements

My brother, Dr. George K. Alex, and brother in law Dr. Deepak John Mathew also deserve my thanks for their endless care and love. Bichachen directed me to ecological economics and Deepakachachen nurture that dream. I am thankful to my sisters Beebammama (Mareena) and Blessy for their emotional supports and love to me; to younger brother in law Dr. Eapen Koshy (AU Allahabad) for his valuable suggestions and help in the soil related scientific data. Thanks to Ruby Chechi for her motherly care, love and support during my studies. My sincere thank to my in laws- Mr. Georgekutty (Pappa) and Mrs. Lally (Amma) and Santhosh for their blessings, love and concerns on me.

Lastly, it is my lovely and lively nephews and nieces Adhit, Aastha, Anakha, Adina and Aarav who have been the source of my liveliness. Their jokes, laughter and playfulness have always enlivened my spirits. And to my soul mate and best friend Liju, she came to me in the last lap of my research and share the stressful sleepless nights.

If I have left anyone out, I sincerely apologize, but know that my thanks goes out to you as well. Any mistakes within the text are unintentional and purely the fault of the author.

Thank you.

Thomson K. Alex