

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This study would not have taken its present form without the help of many wonderful teachers with whom I had the privilege of working. However inadequate words may be, I do wish to convey through them, my debt of gratitude.

Prof. J. - Birje Patil, my guide, has been most supportive and inspiring in every phase of this work. His teaching and unstinted support has shaped this work. Without him, it would have remained incomplete.

Prof. J.O. Barnhill, Dept. of Theatre Arts, Brown University is another unique person whose unflinching help and affection has steered the life of many a students. I have the privilege of being one of them. The kind of generosity and trust that he has vested in his students is quite unparalleled. I hope this work, in its own humble way will help towards issues of international understanding that he cherishes so much.

I am equally fortunate for having worked with Prof. Richard Schechner, Dept. of Performance Studies, New York University, during my one year tenure as a Fulbright scholar. He made my stay in America worthwhile by helping me conduct field-work, and by his receptivity to my point-of-view. I shall always cherish the warmth, criticism and dialogue that he offered so willingly.

Besides my teachers, Dr. S.S. Talwar (my husband), Dept. of Chemistry, Indian Institute of Technology, Bombay, provided unfailing support and unsparing critical opinion throughout. Many of my ideas were chiselled better because of our continuous discussion about science and scientific processes. To him and to our children Malvika (9) and Siddharth (4) I owe very special thanks for all the love and cooperation that they offered.

Many others have helped me with books and other research material. I wish to thank :

JoAnne Akalitis, and the Performing Arts Services, Soho, New York, for sharing unpublished plays of the experimental, off-off Broadway;

the Byrd Hoffman Foundation for sharing works of Philip Glass and Robert Wilson;

the Elmer Holmes Bobst Library staff at New York University for helping me conduct computer survey on availability of studies of science-drama;

the United States Educational Foundation in India for offering me the Fulbright grant that enabled me to study drama in New York University and helped me conduct first-hand survey of American theatre;

my colleagues Mr. A.A. Mutalik-Desai, Dr. M.S. Malshe, Dr. V. Kirpal, Mrs. S. Paranjape, Prof. Miss. I. Mahadevan, Prof. Mrs. N. Swamidasan for helping me with books. Mr. Mutalik-Desai in particular for having agreed to proof-read the thesis painstakingly;

the library staff of Central Library, Indian Institute of Technology, Bombay for last minute reference details;

my typist Mr. M.M. Vijayan, who prepared neat copies of this long drawn-out study.

The acknowledgements will be incomplete without recording due thanks to my parents, Dr. Ranveer Saxena and Dr. Sateshwari Saxena, whose belief in scientific outlook has shaped my life and work.

Bombay

March, 1987.

NEELIMA TALWAR