

CHAPTER VII

A LINGUISTIC STUDY OF THE EPIC

Linguistics is the study of human language. Knowledge of linguistics, however, is different from the knowledge of a language. Just as a person is able to drive a car without understanding the inner workings of the engine, so, too, a speaker can use a language without any conscious knowledge of its internal structure. And conversely, a linguist can know and understand the internal structure of a language without actually speaking it.

The present epic offers a wealth of word-forms and affords us a peep into the established usage and the vocabulary. Therefore, a linguistic study of the present epic is attempted in this chapter. We found here a glimpse of the various phonetic tendencies. We come across a number of prepositional verbs with a rich variety of meanings, at times, most striking and illuminating. Thus the linguistic study of the Bhīṣmacaritam is bound to be very fruitful. It will surely further the knowledge of the language and arouse fresh curiosity to know the true meanings of idioms. To fulfil this task, the present study is offered. If it enables to stimulate the interest in studying the language of the epic Bhīṣmacaritam, it will serve its purpose.

I could not include all the aspects of language because it may unnecessarily give rise to the number of pages of the thesis which is not my aim. I have just focused on some of the significant aspects of poet's language and his grammatical knowledge. As language is one of the main aspects of poetic talent, I have avoided a list of parts of speech including nouns, pronouns and adjectives. I have presented the linguistic study of the epic in the following heads:

From the above analysis, it is observed that poet has used the polished language rich in vocabulary. Through the list of compounds, it is clear that our poet is master in making the use of different compounds at various places meaningfully. Moreover, our poet has enriched the present epic with the maximum usage of different indeclinables separately as well as jointly with different words or verb-forms. The poet has also effectively used different participles like Gerund, Infinitive of Purpose, Present Past, Present Past Passive, Past Passive participles etc. Further, our poet is keen in the application of different tenses and moods, especially, Perfect Past and Periphrastic Perfect Past with आम्. My 2nd observation is that many of the verses of the epic do not contain any verb usage. He uses participles in place of verb forms at some places. Thus it can be said in nutshell that our poet has profound knowledge of grammar and its proper application in expressing his genius. His style of composition is like that of classical poets. He does not require using artificially coined words in his composition. The reason may be the theme of the present epic itself is mythological and does not require any off the dictionary words. It is also important to note that though the poet belongs to the modern age where the influence of regional languages is natural, still he has not used or he has not borrowed a single non-Sanskrit word.
