

Acknowledgments

This research is dedicated to my dear parents, Shaila and Madhav Gandhi. My mother, for boosting my morale at several times during the doctoral program. My father, for inspiring me to strive towards perseverance. This doctoral work would have remained a dream without their support and constant encouragement.

My husband Priyo, for his valuable support and encouragement. It would have been difficult to sail through this period without his support.

My son Ishaan, for bearing my prolonged absence during the research phase. For pushing me towards my goal, by innocently asking 'when will you finish writing the book so that we can play?'

My brother Mukul, for inspiring and motivating me. For bearing with me on several occasions, when I called him up for technical assistance, any time in the day or night. For taking out time to read my work and for giving valuable suggestions. For being there for me always.

Asra, for her care, love and genuine concern with my progress.

Prof. Rajaram, my guide and for making me think out of the box. For being receptive to my ideas and prodding me to strive towards my goal. His approach to research has ignited a passion for constant learning. I am extremely fortunate to have got the opportunity to work under his guidance.

I can never thank enough my dearest friend, Maitree for being the pillar of strength throughout the research period. For her constant questioning of issues related to this research and for priceless suggestions. For her relentless support and help on numerous occasions without which this journey would have become difficult.

Dr. Sreedevi Xavier, for her faith in my abilities and for her valuable suggestions especially in the initial stages of my research. For her concern and support all the way through.

Prof. Pradeep Singh Choondawat, Head, Department of Sociology for his cooperation and support.

Prof. Shagufa Kapadia, Head, Department of Human Development and Family Studies, for being supportive of my work.

Rachna Kulkarni, for insightful discussions on research. Swati Joshi, Divya Sharma, Bhamini Mehta and Smita Bodhankar for their concern and intermittent help at various stages.

I owe thanks to all the artists and the respondents for participating in the study. Especially Prof. Ratan Parimoo and Naina Dalal for the help provided by them.

To my teachers from the department of Sociology and colleagues from the department of Human Development Family Studies.
