

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This research topic has been very close to my heart. Having seen test anxiety from very close quarters, I had an irresistible urge to reach out to people going through test anxiety-related concerns. Now at the end of this arduous expedition in doctoral research, I believe more than ever that gratitude is the best attitude. I am immensely grateful to the Lord for accompanying me in weathering the storms in pursuit of the dream of doctoral research.

Every research is a journey into the unknown, one which can only be undertaken with an able guide. My research supervisor Dr. Anjuli Verma (Former Head of the Department, Department of Psychology, Faculty of Education and Psychology, M. S. University, Vadodara) has been such a guide to me and I am profoundly grateful for her continuous support, patience, motivation, and erudite scholarship. Her guidance helped me throughout the research and writing phases of this thesis. I could not have imagined having a better supervisor.

Dr. R. C. Patel, Dean, Faculty of Education and Psychology has been a constant source of inspiration and support to me. Dr. Ramesh Kothari has been instrumental in organizing my thoughts and providing a kickstart to this research by directing me in the guide selection process. Dr. Rashmin Sompura, HOD, Faculty of Education and Psychology has been a teacher who always enkindled my heart through his erudite lectures. I am very grateful for his continued support and cheerful responses even to my silly questions. He always challenged to me move out of my comfort zone and reach for more.

I have been extremely privileged to find an amazing mentor in the person of Prof. Radheshyam. With his insightful comments and encouragement and thought-provoking questions, he widened the scope of my research from various perspectives. He cared a lot about my work and responded to my questions and queries so promptly.

I am truly grateful to all the trustees, Dr. Devanshu Patel, Dr. Geetika Madan Patel, Dr. Parul Patel, Dr. Komal Patel, the principals, and teachers of the Paramedical Department of Parul University, BITs Education Campus, and Sigma Group of Institutes for their permission for data collection and assistance in carrying out this research. I thank Dr. Dhaval Bhatt for her support throughout the research.

There were numerous students who directly or indirectly participated in my research; many students who were a part of this intervention, and many others who were volunteers in making all the physical arrangements like providing water, keeping the room clean, and making sure that there is silence while I was conducting sessions. Without them, this research would not have materialized. I gratefully acknowledge each one of them and the parents of the participating students for their consent.

I bow my head in awe as I remember Dr. Mario Xavier with happy memory who inspired me to imagine this research. The flame that he lit in our hearts continue even after he departed from this world. It is with great joy and gratitude that I remember Dr. B. M. Palan and Mr. Sumit Ghoshal who initiated me to the world of Hypnotherapy, observed my initial sessions, gave me constructive feedback, and polished my skills as a psychotherapist. I thank Dr. Urmi Nanda Biswas for all the positivity and guidance in all our interactions. Thank you, Dr. Preeti Nair, for helping me with proofreading and helping me enhance the language.

The office staff at the department, Paresh Sir, Neela Ma'am, Shradhha Ma'am, and Mayur Sir have greatly supported and guided me with all the paperwork and official documentation requirements. My friendly neighbors kept asking me for updates about the research at regular intervals. And all my friends kept reminding me that I need to prioritize this research. And all the support staff for offering their hospitality services to student participants as and when needed. I am thankful for each of them for being there for me.

My family members have been a constant source of strength and support to me. My parents Mr. D. H. Patel and Mrs. S. D. Patel always believed in me. From time to time they very lovingly reminded me that their daughter is a champion. My sister Disha made me believe that I can do it. I am grateful to my husband Bhavin for never pressurizing me by questioning about the status or progress of this research. Though he was distant due to work commitments, he just made sure that I do not have any additional pressure. Thanks to my parents-in-law for accepting the ups and downs of this tumultuous journey.

When I started this journey in 2014, my daughter Brinda was around 5 years old. I overheard her once talking to a friend: “I don’t think that my Mom is very smart, all my friends’ mothers have finished their studies but my Mumma is still studying!” That was an incredible inspiration for me as I told myself that when my daughter grows up, I wanted her to feel that her mother has been smart enough. Despite her doubts, Brinda stood by me throughout my research. She offered me water whenever she woke up in the middle of the night and saw me working on this project. She sat with me while I used to enter data and organized the papers that kept falling off my desk. She made me feel accompanied throughout my Ph.D. Research. Thank you, Brinda!

My friend Sanil, from the first day, made me feel that I am not alone with this study. Right from preparing the modules, to writing the rationale, during the intervention phase, and the writing phase, he always kept assuring me, ‘Dipal... ho jaayega!’

Finally, a big Thank you to all my teachers, friends, colleagues, family members, neighbors, and of course all my students for their love and faith in me.

I truly feel blessed.
